Practice Essentials

Acute gastrointestinal bleeding is a potentially life-threatening abdominal emergency that remains a common cause of hospitalization. Upper gastrointestinal bleeding (UGIB) is defined as bleeding derived from a source proximal to the ligament of Treitz.

The image below depicts an ulcer with active bleeding.

Ulcer with active bleeding.

Signs and symptoms

Signs and symptoms of acute upper GI bleeding[1] include the following:

- Hematemesis
- Melena
- Hematochezia
- Syncope
- Presyncope
- Dyspepsia
- Epigastric pain
- Heartburn
- Diffuse abdominal pain
- Dysphagia
- Weight loss
- Jaundice

See Clinical Presentation for more detail.

Diagnosis

Workup includes the following:

- Orthostatic blood pressure
- Complete blood count with differential
- Hemoglobin level
- Type and crossmatch blood
- Basic metabolic profile, blood urea nitrogen, and coagulation profile
- Calcium level
- Gastrin level
- Endoscopy
- Chest radiography
- Nasogastric lavage
- Angiography (if bleeding persists and endoscopy fails to identify a bleeding site)

Computed tomography scanning and ultrasonography may be indicated for the evaluation of the following[2]:

- Liver disease with cirrhosis
- Cholecystitis with hemorrhage
- Pancreatitis with pseudocyst and hemorrhage
- Aortoenteric fistula

See Workup for more detail.

Intravenous PPIs against intravenous H2 antagonists that consider H2 (H2AS) antagonists are used with similar intent in other disease states, their use in UGIB Ã was studied alongside PPI. A 2015 meta-analysis evaluating the two classes in the UGIB setting found that while the difference in mortality Ã¨ was found to be insignificant, results such as recurrent bleeding rate and receiving surgery rate show a clear benefit in PPI. This deficit is likely due to inferiority of H2AS at the maintenance of the gastric pH over 6.0, the approximate pH in which the coagulation processes can work.29 The macrolides in the effort to improve visualization during endoscopy and thus decrease the need of repeated endoscopy, antimicrobial erythromycin, an antimicrobial macrolide Also acts as a procenetic agent, Ã¨ commonly used.
